S P JAIN SYDNEY AND EBE PRESENT

SIMULATION AS A TEACHING METHOD IN BUSINESS STUDIES

Business Studies and Commerce teachers have the opportunity to attend a simulation class at S P Jain. A typical business makes hundreds of decisions on a daily basis. Our programs amalgamate cutting-edge simulations to give students the skills and experience they need to make the right decisions. The Harvard Leadership Simulation focuses on how teams make complex decisions when critical information is distributed unevenly among members and when members have partially conflicting goals. Sophisticated computer software simulates the real world and enables participants to practice in a safe environment and learn from the mistakes made.

Key outcomes
- Explore influences on collective decision-making- including team dynamics, opposing interest, and cognitive biases
- Analyse different leadership approaches and team responses
- Understand effective strategies for building, participating in, and leading teams more effectively
- Explore simulations as a complimentary learning technique
